SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

Present: Mr. Chief Justice Burger, Mr. Justice Douglas, Mr. Justice Brennan, Mr. Justice White, Mr. Justice Marshall, and Mr. Justice Rehnquist.

The Chief Justice said:

"Today's orders of the Court have been certified by the Chief Justice, filed with the Clerk, and will not be announced orally."

APPEALS—SUMMARY DISPOSITION

No. 73-711. John Cryan et al., appellants, v. Hamar Theaters, Inc., et al. Appeal from the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey. Judgment vacated and case remanded to the United States District Court for the District of New Jersey to determine whether the cause is moot in light of State v. DeSantis, 65 N. J. 462 (1974).

No. 73-7014. George H. Jones, appellant, v. Florida. Appeal from the Supreme Court of Florida. The appeal is dismissed for want of a properly presented federal question. Dissenting opinion by Mr. Justice Brennan with whom Mr. Justice Douglas and Mr. Justice Marshall join.

No. 74-67. Fagan Dickson, appellant, v. Gerald R. Ford and Elmer Staats. Appeal from the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas. This is an appeal, assertedly brought under 28 U.S.C. § 1253, from a three-judge court order dismissing a complaint which sought to enjoin a federal statute upon the ground of its unconstitutionality, 28 U.S.C. § 2282. The court found the case "non-justiciable" because the appellant lacked standing to sue and because the case involved a "political question." Where a three-judge court dismisses a complaint as being non-justiciable, appeal does not lay to this Court under 28 U.S.C. § 1253. Gonzalez v. Automatic Employees Credit Union, — U.S. — (1974). Accordingly, the order is vacated and the case is remanded to the United States District Court for the Western District of Texas so that a fresh order may be entered from which a timely appeal may be taken to the United States Court of Appeals. 28 U.S.C. § 1291.

No. 74-69. Rosa Padilla, appellant, v. Abe Lavine, etc., et al. Appeal from the Court of Appeals of New York. The appeal is dismissed for want of a substantial federal question.

No. 74-434. Colorado Civil Rights Commission, etc., appellant, v. Colorado, etc., et al. Appeal from the Supreme Court of Colorado. The appeal is dismissed for want of a substantial federal question.

No. 74-5486. Claude E. Brimm, appellant, v. Workmen's Compensation Appeals Board et al. Appeal from the Court of Appeal of California, Second Appellate District. The appeal is dismissed for want of a substantial federal question.

No. 74-235. Harold Seidernfaden and Louisville Professional Firefighters' Association, Local Union No. 345, I.A.F.F., AFL-CIO, appellants, v. City of Louisville, Division of Fire, Safety Director, et al. Appeal from the Court of Appeals of Kentucky. The appeal is dismissed for want of jurisdiction. Treating the papers whereon the appeal was taken as a petition for writ of certiorari, certiorari denied. Mr. Justice Douglas would postpone further consideration of the question of jurisdiction to a hearing of the case on the merits.

No. 74-437. Lonnie North, appellant, v. C. B. Russell et al. Appeal from the Court of Appeals of Kentucky. Upon the representation of the Attorney General of Kentucky set forth in his motion to dismiss or affirm filed in this Court on November 29, 1974, judgment vacated and case remanded to the Court of Appeals of Kentucky for further consideration in light of the position presently asserted by the Commonwealth.

No. 74-517. Alexander R. Mercer et al., appellants, v. Michigan State Board of Education et al. Appeal from the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Michigan. Judgment affirmed. Mr. Justice Douglas, Mr. Justice Brennan and Mr. Justice White would note probable jurisdiction and set case for oral argument.

Mr. Solicitor General Bork addressed the Court as follows:

“Mr. Chief Justice and may it please the Court:

“At a meeting of the members of the Bar of the Supreme Court just concluded, resolutions expressing profound sorrow at the death of Mr. Justice Charles Evans Whittaker were offered by a committee, of which Mr. Samuel Molby was Chairman. Addresses were offered by Mr. Carl Enggas of the Missouri Bar, Judge Bruce Forrester of the United States Tax Court, and by Mr. Senator Roman Hruska of Nebraska.

“The resolutions unanimously adopted are as follows:

We meet to record our respect and regard for Charles Evans Whittaker, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court of the United States from 1957 to 1962. His death on November 26, 1973, has saddened the members of the legal profession, his family, his friends, and those everywhere who admired and respected him.

Charles Evans Whittaker was born February 22, 1901, near Troy, Kansas. He spent his early years on his father's farm. In later life, in addition to recalling the hard work of farming, he also recounted that he ran a trapline on his way to school. He recalled that his most frequent quarry was skunks and that while their pelts brought three dollars each, he also recalled that his popularity at school was not enhanced, particularly in the winter when cold weather required the windows to be kept closed.

His formal education was interrupted after completion of the ninth grade, and he returned to farming and trapping. The interruption was only temporary, however, because as soon as he had accumulated $750, he set out for Kansas City to enroll in the University of Kansas City Law School.

A high school diploma was a requirement of admission, but Justice Whittaker convinced the Admissions Committee to accept him on condition that he complete his high school course simultaneously with his law studies, which he did.

Justice Whittaker once told an interviewer that he had loved the law since his earliest recollection and he approached his law school studies in that spirit.

He was graduated from the University of Kansas City Law School in 1923 and was admitted to practice before the courts of Missouri in that year. He immediately joined the Kansas City firm of Watson, Ess & Gage, for whom he had worked as a messenger while in law school.

In 1928, he married Winifred Pugh. It was a long and happy marriage, and they were to have three sons, Keith, Kent, and Gary, each of whom now resides in Kansas City.

He fashioned a successful career at the bar, becoming a partner of his firm in 1930, and he rose to become a leading trial lawyer in Kansas City, involved primarily in litigation on behalf of corporate clients. But he believed, with Mr. Justice Brandeis, that every man owes something to his profession and he was therefore active in the organized bar, serving as president of the Missouri Bar Association in 1953 to 1954.

In that year, 1954, he was appointed to the United States District Court for the Western District of Missouri, and served in that capacity until June 22, 1956, when he was appointed a judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit.

As a district judge, he continued the hard work and long hours that had been hallmarks of his practice of law, and he confessed that he was, from time to time, sorely tempted to descend from the bench and join in the fray.

Upon leaving the bar and taking his place as a district judge, he said:

"I now say farewell to the practice of law I have loved so well. It is a step that one does not contemplate lightly. Yet I do this willingly, and I hope that there will be no change in me. If you have liked me as a lawyer, then you should like me as a judge, for I shall not change. The law has been my life. I wish every man who devotes his life to it could love it as I do."

Justice Whittaker served on the Court of Appeals for only one year, until March 3, 1957, when he was nominated as an Associate Justice of this Court by President Eisenhower. His nomination was hailed by the public and the profession alike, and he was quickly confirmed by the Senate.

He served as an Associate Justice for five years, from 1957 through 1962. During his service on this Court, he wrote 42 majority opinions and 50 concurring or dissenting opinions.

By training and inclination, his primary interest lay in the field of commercial law, as is shown by his opinions involving complex tax issues, such as Turnbow v. Commissioner, and Allied Stores of Ohio v. Bowers; and in difficult patent cases, such as Aro Manufacturing Company v. Convertible Top Replacement Company.

His work was not, of course, limited to issues of commercial law or taxation, and his opinions concerning matters of constitutional law are found in such decisions as Staub v. City of Baxley, which held a local ordinance regulating permits for solicitation of membership in organizations violative of the First Amendment; and Payne v. Arkansas, which dealt with coerced confessions in criminal cases; and McNeal v. Culver, concerning the right to counsel.

In the spring of 1962, Mr. Justice Whittaker was advised by his physician that his health would be endangered if he continued to serve on this Court. Bowing to that advice, he submitted his resignation on March 30, 1962, which was acknowledged by the Chief Justice and his Associate Justices with deep regret.

After his resignation from the Court, he returned to Kansas City. And in the 2 years following his resignation, he worked actively for the American Bar Association and also served as a member of the American Medical Association's commission for the in-depth study of post-graduate medical education. He contributed his time and his efforts to several civic and charitable enterprises in the Kansas City area, including the Kansas City Hospital.

In 1965, he became an arbitrator on behalf of the General Motors Corporation and was engaged in deciding controversies between that firm and its dealers.

To the end of his life, Mr. Justice Whittaker continued a deep interest in the law and in the contribution that courts and lawyers can make to the resolution of social conflict by litigation or arbitration.

He frequently expressed his concern about what he perceived to be an increasing tendency in our society to resort to political or economic pressures rather than to the methods of dispute settlements established by the legal system.

Wherefore, it is resolved that we, the Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, express our profound sorrow at the death of Justice Charles Evans Whittaker, and our grateful appreciation for his long years of service in the judicial branch of his national government, and in civil life, culminating with his work as a Justice of the Supreme Court.

And it is further resolved that the Solicitor General be asked to present these resolutions to the Court with the prayer that they be embodied in its permanent records and that copies of these resolutions be forwarded to the widow and to the children of Justice Whittaker.

The Chief Justice said:

"Thank you, Mr. Solicitor General, your motion will be granted. I recognize the Attorney General of the United States."

Mr. Attorney General Levi addressed the Court as follows:

"Mr. Chief Justice, may it please the Court:

"The Bar of this Court met today to honor the memory of Charles Evans Whittaker, Associate Justice of the Supreme Court from 1957 to 1962.

Mr. Justice Whittaker's appointment to this Court on March 3, 1957, was the culmination of a distinguished professional career. He came to this Court with not only an outstanding reputation at the bar gained as a leading trial lawyer in Kansas City, but also with prior judicial experience from his service as both a federal district judge in the Western District of Missouri and as a judge of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eighth Circuit. Indeed, he was one of the few members of this Court to have served at every level of the federal judiciary.

Although his opinions covered the full range of the subject matter jurisdiction of this Court, Justice Whittaker's primary interest, due no doubt to his experience at the practicing bar, was in the area of commercial law. During his tenure as an Associate Justice, he authored many of this Court's decisions involving federal and State taxation. In Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company v. Bowers, for example, he dealt with the subtleties and intricacies of State power of taxation, measured against the Import-Export Clause, reconciling their competing demands in an opinion for the Court that remains the leading exposition of that complex subject.

Justice Whittaker drew on his experience as a trial lawyer and as a district judge in dealing with several important questions of federal jurisdiction. In Florida Lime and Avocado Growers v. Jacobson, he thoroughly canvassed the legislative history of statutory provisions and judicial precedent regarding three-judge courts, and in Hoffman v. Blaski, he provided authoritative guidance for federal trial judges concerning the transfer of venue provisions of 28 USC 1404. His most significant opinion in this area, and perhaps his most significant opinion as a member of this Court, was Leedom v. Kyne, in which he carefully analyzed the relevant provisions of the National Labor Relations Act in Title 28 of the United States Code, in sustaining the jurisdiction of federal district courts to entertain suits challenging ultra vires actions of the Labor Board.

He brought similar penetration, rigor, and respect for the rule of law to bear in his opinions in Klein, the constitutional safeguards of liberties to challenged governmental action. In one of his most memorable opinions for the Court, Staub v. City of Baxley, he found constitutionally invalid a city ordinance requiring a permit for soliciting membership in any organization requiring fees or dues from its members, in giving the Mayor and City Council uncontrolled discretion to grant or deny such a permit. He wrote for the Court that in thus making, "the enjoyment of speech contingent upon the will of the mayor and council of the city, such an ordinance imposes an unconstitutional prior restraint on the enjoyment of First Amendment freedoms."

Whatever the issue involved, Mr. Justice Whittaker's opinions were marked by a degree of care and precision that reflected his view that the law was a calling to hard work, and he once observed that justice cannot be produced through any system of procedures alone; in the main, it must always be the product of long hours of hard, diligent, painstaking labor by highly competent, experienced, careful and practical lawyers.

Throughout his career, as both a lawyer and a judge, Mr. Justice Whittaker adhered to those principles and combined them with a spirit of cooperation and good will. While always showing esteem for his brethren on the Court, and sincere respect for their work, he did not hesitate to take telling issue on occasions with what he regarded as analytical shortcomings in the Court's opinions. Examples of this are his dissenting opinion in James v. United States, analyzing powerfully and lucidly the tax consequences of embezzlement, illuminating the basic concept of taxable income, and his concurring opinion in Gomillion v. Lightfoot, dealing succinctly with the relationship between the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendment claims in that case.

On the occasion of his resignation from this Court, compelled by his physician's advice, his brethren on this Court, in acknowledging his departure with regret, wrote to him:

"Our five years of association with you have been in the finest traditions of the Court, no Justice could have worked harder or in more complete harmony with his brethren."

As a personal matter, I hope it is appropriate for me to note that over a two-year period I served with Justice Whittaker on a citizens commission which explored in considerable depth the problems of graduate medical education. This was a matter of considerable interest to Justice Whittaker, and he brought to the work of the commission his extraordinary powers of analysis and his determination to think through the very difficult issues of policy. Working with Justice Whittaker during this period was a rare experience, which I greatly value.

I will close with the tribute paid to Mr. Justice Whittaker in the letter from Phineas Rosenberg of the Kansas City Bar to the Solicitor General. Mr. Rosenberg wrote:

"My close friendship with Mr. Justice Whittaker began in the early days of our respective lives and continued for years until his death. Thus, you can know and understand that my heart is full of fondest memories of him, which I shall always cherish, of a great love and admiration of him as a great lawyer, an outstanding jurist, and a man having the highest concept of honor and integrity, whose aim in life was to do justice fairly and impartially, and of respect for his high standards of patriotism. No man had a greater or more unrestrained love for his country."

May it please this honorable Court, in the name of the lawyers of this nation and particularly for the Bar of this Court, I respectfully request that the resolution presented to you in memory of the late Justice Charles Evans Whittaker be accepted by you and that it, together with a chronicle of these proceedings, be ordered kept for all time in the records of this Court."

The Chief Justice said:

"Your motion is granted, Mr. Attorney General, and we thank you for these statements and tributes of the Supreme Court Bar to our late brother, Charles Evens Whittaker.

These presentations made here today in his memory will be made a permanent part of the records of this Court, and we ask you to convey to the Chairman and the other members of the Committee on Resolutions our appreciation for their presentation today.

We accept these memorial tributes to Mr. Justice Whittaker made by you, Mr. Attorney General, and you, Mr. Solicitor General, on behalf of the Memorial Committee.

You have appropriately paid tribute to Justice Whittaker as a self-made lawyer who became one of the foremost advocates of his bar and whose talents were sought by many clients during his years of private practice.

His high standing as a lawyer was acknowledged by his peers, as you have already noted, by his election to various offices in the organized bar.

Of the 100 men who have come to this Court, including the nine who now hold office, Justice Whittaker was unique in the sense that his professional career covered the entire spectrum of the practice of law and, in addition, he sat as a judge in all three tiers of the federal bench.

Those who sat with him could understand readily why he achieved great success at the bar. He was a perfectionist, with a passion for the facts of the case, both when he was an advocate and when he was a judge. And he was never content after he became a judge, until he had mastered the facts of the case and, in his appellate work, until he mastered the record.

He drove himself unsparingly in his dedication to achieve that mastery, beginning with the petition or the jurisdictional statement and continuing on through to the consideration of the case on the merits.

Those who sat with him agree that he had few peers in terms of profound and conscientious application to his daily work. Indeed, he carried this to a point that was a source of concern to his friends and to his family, as the work of the Court mounted after he reached this Court.

His cheerful aspect in the private exchanges with his colleagues and with members of the bar marked him as a man with a zest for life, and particularly for the day-to-day interchange and discussion of points of law.

His colleagues on each of the courts where he served saw him, and here I use the words of one of the Eighth Circuit judges, "Charles Whittaker was a good man", and he used this in the sense of the innate decency and the firm adherence to high ideals in both his private life and in his public duties.

Few men ever worked more diligently to search out every phase of the questions which were brought to the Court, and his opinions on this Court reflect scrupulous attention to details and comprehensive treatment of all the relevant authorities. He had a firm belief that the Court should not only reach a correct result, but that it had an obligation to demonstrate how that result was reached.

His colleagues at the bar, his colleagues on the United States District Court, his colleagues on the United States Court of Appeals, and the Justices of this Court, and of course his family and his close associates can appropriately take great pride in his splendid career as a lawyer and as a jurist."

ORDER

Ordered:

1. That the rules and forms as approved by the Judicial Conference of the United States, to be known as the Chapter X Rules and Official Chapter X Forms, be, and they hereby are, prescribed pursuant to Section 2075, Title 28, United States Code, to govern the forms of process, writs, pleadings and motions and the practice and procedure under Chapter X of the Bankruptcy Act, in the proceedings and to the extent set forth therein, in the United States district courts, the District Court for the District of the Canal Zone, and the District Courts of Guam and the Virgin Islands.

2. That the aforementioned Chapter X Rules and Official Chapter X Forms shall take effect on August 1, 1975, and shall be applicable to proceedings then pending except to the extent that in the opinion of the court their application in a particular proceeding then pending would not be feasible or would work injustice, in which event the former procedure applies.

3. That General Order in Bankruptcy 52, heretofore prescribed by this Court be, and it hereby is, abrogated, effective August 1, 1975.

ORDERED :

1. That the rules and forms as approved by the Judicial Conference of the United States to be known as the Chapter XII Rules and Official Chapter XII Forms, be, and they hereby are, prescribed pursuant to Section 2075, Title 28, United States Code, to govern the forms of process, writs, pleadings and motions and the practice and procedure under Chapter XII of the Bankruptcy Act, in the proceedings and to the extent set forth therein, in the United States district courts, the District Court for the District of the Canal Zone, and the District Courts of Guam and the Virgin Islands.

2. That the aforementioned Chapter XII Rules and Official Chapter XII Forms shall take effect on August 1, 1975, and shall be applicable to proceedings then pending except to the extent that in the opinion of the court their application in a particular proceeding then pending would not be feasible or would work injustice, in which event the former procedure applies.

3. That General Orders in Bankruptcy Nos. 41 and 54 and Official Forms in Bankruptcy Nos. 53 to 57 inclusive, heretofore prescribed by this Court be, and they hereby are, abrogated, effective August 1, 1975.

4. That THE CHIEF JUSTICE be, and he hereby is, authorized to transmit the aforementioned new Chapter XII Rules and Official Chapter XII Forms to the Congress in accordance with the provisions of Title 28, U. S. C. § 2075.

Mr. Justice Douglas, dissenting.

As I have said before, "I cannot agree to the Court's submission of the proposed Bankruptcy Rules to the Congress." 411 U. S. 992 (1973). I once knew a good deal about bankruptcy law, but I no longer have the expertise to say whether the proposed rules are good or bad. Because this Court is no more than a "rubber stamp" I think it should not participate in the rule-making process. The Judicial Conference rather than this Court should send these rules to Congress if they are to be sent at all.

Judgment vacated and case remanded to the Court of Appeals for further proceedings in conformity with the opinion of this Court. Opinion by Mr. Chief Justice Burger.

The Chief Justice said:

"The Court is in special session this afternoon to receive the Resolutions of the Bar of the Supreme Court in tribute to the late Chief Justice Earl Warren."

Mr. Solicitor General Bork addressed the Court as follows:

“Mr. Chief Justice and may it please the Court:

The resolutions unanimously adopted are as follows:

The members of the Bar of the Supreme Court have met today to record our respect and admiration for Earl Warren, who served as Chief Justice of the United States from October 5, 1953, until his retirement on June 23, 1969.

It is impossible to capsule Chief Justice Warren's extraordinary contribution to the life of this Nation, or adequately to express what he meant to the many millions of people—both in the United States and elsewhere—who knew him or knew of him. Earl Warren's retirement as Chief Justice represented the culmination of 52 years of official public service in local, State and National government. His public service hardly lessened, however, upon his retirement from the Court—it simply became unofficial. He originally intended to devote his years of retirement to writing; and, indeed, he completed one book after he left the Court and made substantial progress on others. In recognition of the affection and support that he had received throughout the years from his wife, Nina Warren, and their large family, he dedicated that book “[t]o one of the most important segments of our citizenry, the millions of American mothers—including my wife, Nina—whose fondest hope is that their children will be responsible citizens, and whose faith in humanity and love of freedom sustain their belief that this will be achieved.”¹

Chief Justice Warren's desire for more direct contact with the people whom he had served for so long and his interest in the youth of this nation was too great, however, and he spent most of his retirement travelling to colleges and universities throughout the country—explaining the work of the Court and affirming his faith in our system of justice, his respect for international law and the role of the United Nations and his confidence in the capacity of the American people to assist in the universal realization of all the rights guaranteed by the Constitution. The richness of his legacy, which even today cannot be completely appreciated, will undoubtedly ensure him an important place among the great figures in our Nation's history.

Chief Justice Warren presided during a period often regarded as one of the most turbulent in the Supreme Court's history, and it was perhaps inevitable that the Court's record during those years should have become so closely associated with him. The decisions handed down during the period of Earl Warren's service as Chief Justice are often referred to as decisions of the “Warren Court.” Earl Warren objected to this characterization. And it is true, of course, that Chief Justice Warren was only one among nine: ultimately, with only one vote to cast in conference with his Brethren. Earl Warren was ever mindful of this fact. Indeed, during the ceremonies attending his retirement from the Court, Chief Justice Warren chose to emphasize that the Supreme Court had been manned during his tenure by wholly independent Justices. But he was convinced that this diversity was an important ingredient of the Court's strength. Speaking extemporaneously, Chief Justice Warren noted:

We do not always agree. I hope the Court will never agree on all things. If it ever agrees on all things, I am sure that its virility will have been sapped because it is composed of nine independent men who have no one to be responsible to except their own consciences.²

But Earl Warren's recognition of and respect for the independence of his Brethren was a foundation for, rather than a relinquishment of, his leadership role on the Court. Of course, those not privy to the Court's ultimate deliberations can never know precisely what occurs there. We do know, however, that during Earl Warren's tenure as Chief Justice the Supreme Court rendered decisions among the most important in the Nation's history and that those who served with him on the Court consistently have acknowledged their great respect for the strength and effectiveness of his leadership.

During his tenure Chief Justice Warren became the personification of the Supreme Court. He became the focus for the gratitude of those who approved of the Court's pronouncements and for the criticism of those who did not. The simple courage and dignity that he displayed upon being thrust into this role was of immense public significance, and was in itself a source of institutional strength.

Like Abraham Lincoln, the Chief Justice was subjected to almost unparalleled abuse in the conduct of his office. He was a very human person and these attacks must have made his heart ache, but he never showed in either his demeanor or his decision making that it affected his resolve in any way.

The Chief Justice's courage and dignity characterized his entire public life. Whether as the crusading District Attorney for Alameda County or the Attorney General of California, or as the dedicated and innovative three-term Governor of California, Earl Warren had always refused to compromise principle in the face of public or private criticism and had conducted himself according to the dictates of his conscience.

No one who attended a session of the Supreme Court while Earl Warren was presiding could have failed to be impressed with his attentiveness to the arguments of counsel or to the courtesy and fairness with which proceedings were conducted there under his stewardship. He believed deeply that the Supreme Court belonged to the people, that its continuing vitality depended in the final analysis upon its remaining a "responsive forum of last resort."³ He labored mightily to make this conception of the Court a reality, and the success of those labors is reflected in the decisions of which he was so inseparably a part.

Even the most painstaking efforts to categorize 16 years of Supreme Court litigation, calling for literally hundreds of thousands of individual judgments by members of the Court, cannot escape being inadequate in many respects. We wish, nevertheless, to focus particularly upon three interrelated themes sounded repeatedly in decisions of the Supreme Court rendered during Chief Justice Warren's tenure: the concern with ensuring that the civil rights of all the people would be respected; the effort to strengthen democratic processes of self-government; and the structuring of an equitable system of criminal justice consistent with elemental human dignity. It was perhaps preeminently in these three areas that the Warren Court in general, and Earl Warren in particular, were recognized to be both the product and a producer of a profound moral and constitutional revolution.

I.

If one were required to identify a single societal impulse informing more significantly than any other the development of constitutional law under Earl Warren, it would be the civil rights movement. The rising social consciousness of racial minority groups—partially manifest in their demands for equality under the law—was at once the principal impetus and the result of many of the Supreme Court's decisions during those years. The era began dramatically with Brown v. Board of Education,⁴ which was reargued scarcely two months after Earl Warren assumed office. The opinion written by Chief Justice Warren for a unanimous Court in Brown was more auspicious than many observers realized at the time because its reasoning became the foundation of many other decisions and set the tenor for much of what was to follow.

Formally at issue in Brown and its companion cases were claims by Negro plaintiffs that state law requiring racially segregated public schools deprived them of equal protection of the laws under the Fourteenth Amendment. For nearly 60 years, such claims had been rejected on the authority of the "separate but equal" doctrine of Plessy v. Ferguson.⁵ In the several years immediately preceding Brown, however, the Court's opinion in Plessy v. Ferguson had been substantially eroded—in part because the Court began increasingly to emphasize the “equal” half of the doctrine in assessing the constitutionality of racially segregated educational systems.⁶ But so long as the “separate but equal” doctrine retained any vitality, most objections to educational systems premised upon race could be met at least in theory by reallocating resources, and without sacrificing the principle of racial separateness.

One of the impressive aspects of Chief Justice Warren's opinion for the Court in Brown was its definitiveness. The Court announced that Plessy had no further application in the field of public education, and the form of the Court's statement left little basis for supposing that Plessy would retain any vitality in other contexts:

To separate [Negro children] from others of similar age and qualifications solely because of their race generates a feeling of inferiority as to their status in the community that may affect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely ever to be undone. * * *

* * * * *

We conclude that in the field of public education the doctrine of “separate but equal” has no place. Separate educational facilities are inherently unequal.⁷

The Chief Justice's opinion in Brown also sounded other notes that were subsequently to recur. One was its emphasis on the relationship between education and successful participation in the community's life and its democratic processes:

Today, education is perhaps the most important function of state and local governments. Compulsory school attendance laws and the great expenditures for education both demonstrate our recognition of the importance of education to our democratic society. * * * It is the very foundation of good citizenship. * * * In these days, it is doubtful that any child may reasonably be expected to succeed in life if he is denied the opportunity to an education. Such an opportunity, where the state has undertaken to provide it, is a right which must be made available to all on equal terms.⁸

The Court's decision in Brown unleashed a flood of school desegregation cases. Resistance to the decision was massive and immediate; and in the process of dealing with this resistance, the authority of the Court was challenged as it had not been since the days of John Marshall. Had the resolve—or even the unanimity—of Chief Justice Warren and his Brethren wavered in the face of this resistance, the results could have been disastrous. But they did not waver: while permitting a phased accommodation to the basic principles announced in Brown, bounded by the command that compliance occur "with all deliberate speed,"⁹ the Court in subsequent opinions repeatedly reaffirmed those principles and marked out the area of the constitutional prohibition of racial discrimination countenanced by state law. One of the most notable of the school desegregation opinions following Brown was Cooper v. Aaron.¹⁰ In that opinion, unprecedented in that it was signed by all nine Justices (including those appointed after Brown was decided), the members of the Court jointly stated:

It is, of course, quite true that the responsibility for public education is primarily the concern of the States, but it is equally true that such responsibilities, like all other state activity, must be exercised consistently with federal constitutional requirements as they apply to state action. * * * Since the first Brown opinion three new Justices have come to the Court. They are at one with the Justices still on the Court who participated in that basic decision as to its correctness, and that decision is now unanimously reaffirmed. The principles announced in that decision and the obedience of the States to them, according to the command of the Constitution, are indispensable for the protection of the freedoms guaranteed by our fundamental charter for all of us. Our constitutional ideal of equal justice under law is thus made a living truth.¹¹

The disposition of the school desegregation cases inevitably undermined the legitimacy of other practices premised upon the policy of racial separateness. During the years following the decision in Brown, the Court was confronted with scores of petitions involving claims of racial discrimination in violation of the Fourteenth Amendment. The petitioners in many of those cases sought to overturn state criminal convictions arising out of their participation in civil rights demonstrations of various kinds. In reversing these convictions, the Court—often speaking through Chief Justice Warren—progressively narrowed the scope of permissible state involvement in racially discriminatory conduct.

An important example was Peterson v. City of Greenville.¹² There, the petitioners had been arrested for criminal trespass after having peacefully integrated a lunch counter reserved for whites in a privately-owned department store and having refused to leave when ordered to do so by the manager of the store. Arguing in support of the convictions, the state contended that the racial discrimination complained of was the store manager's private policy rather than a consequence of the city's segregation ordinance, and hence that it did not violate the Fourteenth Amendment's prohibition of state-sanctioned racial discrimination. Chief Justice Warren, writing for the Court, rejected this contention :

[T]hese convictions cannot stand, even assuming, as respondent contends, that the manager would have acted as he did independently of the existence of the ordinance. The State will not be heard to make this contention in support of the convictions. For the convictions had the effect, which the State cannot deny, of enforcing the ordinance passed by the City of Greenville, the agency of the State. When a State agency passes a law compelling persons to discriminate against other persons because of race, and the State's criminal processes are employed in a way which enforces the discrimination mandated by that law, such a palpable violation of the Fourteenth Amendment cannot be saved by attempting to separate the mental urges of the discriminators.¹³

The Court reached the same result in Lombard v. Louisiana,¹⁴ even though in that case there was no state statute or city ordinance forbidding the desegregation of restaurant facilities. Chief Justice Warren's opinion for the Court in Lombard noted, however, that the refusal to serve petitioners had taken place against the backdrop of public statements by city officials to the effect that segregation of restaurant facilities was city policy and that violations of that policy would not be tolerated. In reversing petitioners' convictions, Chief Justice Warren declared that if discrimination mandated by an ordinance may not stand "[e]qually the State cannot achieve the same result by an official command which has at least as much coercive effect as an ordinance."¹⁵

Chief Justice Warren's abiding concern to put an end to discriminatory treatment of persons because of their race was also expressed in his opinion for the Court in Loving v. Virginia.¹⁶ At issue in Loving was the constitutionality of the State of Virginia's anti-miscegenation statutes. The principal argument advanced in support of the statutes was that they did not constitute invidious discrimination based upon race because they applied equally to both participants in an interracial marriage. Chief Justice Warren rejected this contention, noting that "we deal [in this case] with statutes containing racial classifications, and the fact of equal application does not immunize [them] from [a] very heavy burden of justification" under the Fourteenth Amendment.¹⁷ Turning then to the justifications proffered by the State of Virginia, the Chief Justice stated :

There is patently no legitimate overriding purpose independent of invidious racial discrimination which justifies this classification. The fact that Virginia prohibits only interracial marriages involving white persons demonstrates that the racial classifications must stand on their own justification, as measures designed to maintain White Supremacy. We have consistently denied the constitutionality of measures which restrict the rights of citizens on account of race. There can be no doubt that restricting the freedom to marry solely because of racial classifications violates the central meaning of the Equal Protection Clause.¹⁸

II.

Chief Justice Warren—himself a successful Governor and on one occasion his party's nominee for the Vice Presidency—had an abiding confidence in the capacity of the American people for enlightened self-government. He firmly believed that the nation's problems can best be solved through the political process—so long as that process is in fact democratic.

It is not, therefore, surprising that in his judgment the single most important case to be decided by the Supreme Court during the Warren years was *Baker v. Carr*¹⁹—the first case to hold that the right to equal political representation could be secured through court action.²⁰ Indeed, as Chief Justice Warren observed following his retirement, there might well have been no need for a Brown v. Board of Education if the political process had functioned fairly in the post-Civil War years:

“[I]f we had the [Baker v. Carr] decision shortly after the Fourteenth Amendment . . . most of these problems that are confronting us today, particularly the racial problems would have been solved by the political process where they should have been decided, rather than through the courts acting only under the bare bones of the Constitution. And if the Blacks and everyone else could vote . . . [and] if we believe in our institutions, and if we believe that we're all supposed to be equal, every man's vote should be the same as every other man's vote, and eventually our problems will be solved in that manner.”²¹

Baker v. Carr opened a new era of concern for the fairness of our political processes. Chief Justice Warren himself wrote the Court's opinion in *Reynolds v. Sims*²²—probably the most far-reaching of the 170 majority opinions he wrote during his sixteen terms on the Court. The core of Reynolds v. Sims was the holding that the Constitution guarantees equal representation in state legislatures, to be measured generally by the formula "one man, one vote." The rationale of the Court's holding in Reynolds was set forth by Chief Justice Warren in common sense terms that every citizen could understand:

Legislatures represent people, not trees or acres. Legislators are elected by voters, not farms or cities or economic interests. As long as ours is a representative form of government, and our legislatures are those instruments of government elected directly by and directly representative of the people, the right to elect legislators in a free and unimpaired fashion is a bed-rock of our political system. * * *

* * * * *

To the extent that a citizen's right to vote is debased, he is that much less a citizen. The fact that a citizen lives here or there is not a legitimate reason for overweighing or diluting the efficacy of his vote.²³

Thereafter, Chief Justice Warren joined in Justice Stewart's opinion for the Court in Carrington v. Rash,²⁴ holding that while a state can impose reasonable residency requirements for voting it cannot deny the ballot to a bona fide resident simply because he is a member of the armed services, and in Justice Douglas' opinion for the Court in Harper v. Virginia State Board of Elections,²⁵ invalidating state laws making the payment of a poll-tax a prerequisite to voting in state elections. He also joined in Justice Black's majority opinions in United States v. Mississippi,²⁶ holding that the Attorney General of the United States had the authority to challenge devices utilized by the State of Mississippi to disenfranchise blacks, and in Louisiana v. United States,²⁷ invalidating the "interpretation test" employed in the State of Louisiana for a similar purpose.

When Congress enacted the Voting Rights Act of 1965, a far-reaching measure designed to speed the full realization of minority voting rights in those States and localities in which the problems of disenfranchisement had been most persistent, it was Chief Justice Warren who wrote the Court's opinion in South Carolina v. Katzenbach,²⁸ upholding the challenged provisions.

The principal issues in the case turned on the proper interpretation of Section 2 of the Fifteenth Amendment, which gives Congress the power to enforce the proscription contained in Section 1 forbidding the States from denying United States citizens the right to vote on account of race or color. Chief Justice Warren stated that "[t]he basic test to be applied in a case involving Section 2 of the Fifteenth Amendment is the same as in all cases concerning the express powers of Congress in relation to the reserved powers of the States."²⁹ He then quoted the classic statement of his illustrious predecessor, Chief Justice Marshall:

Let the end be legitimate, let it be within the scope of the constitution, and all means which are appropriate, which are plainly adapted to that end, which are not prohibited, but consist with the letter and spirit of the constitution, are constitutional.³⁰

He concluded with the deeply felt hope that:

[M]illions of non-white Americans will now be able to participate for the first time on an equal basis in the government under which they live. We may finally look forward to the day when truly "[t]he right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."³¹

III.

Prior to his appointment to the Court, much of Earl Warren's life had been devoted to the administration of criminal justice. His vigor and even-handedness as a state prosecutor had contributed significantly to his early electoral successes in California and, to a somewhat lesser extent, his national prominence. This background gave him an understanding of the practical problems of criminal law enforcement that made him confident that enforcement of the law could be successfully achieved within the bounds of constitutional restrictions. He deeply believed that the ultimate protection of our society required that law enforcement officers, no less than others, be held to observance of the legal strictures on their conduct.

During Earl Warren's tenure as Chief Justice, an important series of decisions evolved, almost inexorably, into a principle that the Fourteenth Amendment's command that "[n]o state shall * * * deprive any person of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law" applies in full measure to state law enforcement efforts most of the more specific constitutional restrictions on federal criminal procedure. Extensive reform of the Nation's criminal law enforcement has been the result. If there was an identifiable starting point, it was Griffin v.

³¹ Id. at 337.

Illinois.³² Justice Clark has simply and ably reconstructed the events from that point:

[Griffin] made a simple demand and one that everyone would agree had merit. It was that a transcript or authentic record of some kind should be furnished to indigent defendants on their conviction and appeal. People with money could get a transcript and, it was argued, to deny one to the convicted poor was an invidious discrimination. The Court agreed. I, for one, never dreamed that Griffin would trigger so many serious constitutional questions under the sixth amendment in such a short time. Yet in one decade cases were filed in the Court and decided that overturned our whole concept of criminal justice. The lawyers reasoned after Griffin: What good is a transcript to a poor person if he does not have a lawyer?

This led to Gideon v. Wainwright, which required counsel to be appointed for indigent defendants in felony prosecutions. The question then posed was: What good a lawyer unless he is available at every vital point in the prosecution? And Escobedo v. Illinois, in the very next year, answered: The lawyer must be available when the suspect is "focussed" upon as the accused. Finally, the sixty-four dollar question was: When does the "focus" occur? And the answer was: Before interrogation, which led to the warnings of Miranda v. Arizona. It was written by Chief Justice Warren.³³

It would unduly lengthen these proceedings were we to attempt to catalogue more completely even the major decisions of the Supreme Court under Chief Justice Warren dealing with the administration of criminal justice. It may be sufficient to recall that the basic reforms effected during the period invariably had the Chief Justice's full support—a support that stemmed from his conviction that society's highest aspirations could not be realized unless its governors and the governed alike were required to observe the law. The Chief Justice expressed this conviction with great eloquence in the opinion he wrote for the Court in Spano v. New York,³⁴ a case involving a claim that the petitioner's conviction had been secured in part through use of an involuntary confession. The Chief Justice stated that Spano's claim called upon the Court to resolve a conflict between two fundamental interests of society: its interest in prompt and efficient law enforcement and its interest in preventing the rights of its individual members from being abridged by unconstitutional methods of law enforcement.

The abhorrence of society to the use of involuntary confessions does not turn alone on their inherent untrustworthiness. It also turns on the deep-rooted feeling that the police must obey the law while enforcing the law; that in the end life and liberty can be as much endangered from illegal methods used to convict those thought to be criminals as from the actual criminals themselves.³⁵

As Chief Justice of the United States, Earl Warren was for sixteen years the principal custodian of the legal institutions and processes which, along with our right to self-government which he so notably fostered, are America's most hallowed treasure. He was acutely conscious of the magnitude of his responsibilities as Chief Justice, and for all of those years he devoted his great energies to performing his responsibilities as Chief Justice as effectively as possible. Only the most insistent urgings in the name of the national interest—as with his chairing of the Warren Commission—were permitted to intrude upon his devotion to his duties as Chief Justice; but even during the period when the work of the Warren Commission was in progress, Chief Justice Warren continued his full workload at the Court. Always, his reverence for the Constitution was the devoted faith of a man dedicated to two linked tasks—“to * * * establish Justice * * * and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity.”

Wherefore, it is resolved that we, the Bar of the Supreme Court of the United States, express our profound sense of loss at the passing of Chief Justice Earl Warren; we have been made a better People by the dignity, courage and wisdom that he brought to his duties; and we shall forever be strengthened in our resolve to respect the rights of others by his insight that the rights of each of us depend upon the rights of all; and it is further

Resolved, that the Solicitor General be asked to present these resolutions to the Court and that the Attorney General be asked to move that they be inscribed upon the Court's permanent records.”

The Chief Justice said:

“Thank you, Mr. Solicitor General and I recognize the Attorney General of the United States.”

Mr. Attorney General Levi addressed the Court as follows:

“Mr. Chief Justice, and may it please the Court:

The Bar of this Court met today to honor the memory of Chief Justice Earl Warren. During the years of his stewardship, which spanned the 16 terms beginning in 1953, the Court confronted issues among the most important in its history—issues profoundly affecting the quality of our lives. Chief Justice Warren brought to this task human values of inestimable importance: common sense, unswerving personal integrity, great courage, dignity, an abiding respect for those liberal and egalitarian tenets that are distinctive features of our conception of government.

³⁵ Id. at 315, 320.

Earl Warren came to this Court with almost 35 years' experience in state government. As a District Attorney and Attorney General of California he earned a reputation as a firm and fair enforcer of the law, gaining insights into the practical aspects of law enforcement, and building a basis for an assured approach—which grew throughout the years—of necessary guidelines for official conduct.

As Governor of California, Earl Warren proposed programs to promote dignity and opportunity for every individual—programs to ease the problems of the aged, to provide universal medical care through a system of compulsory health insurance, and to reduce racial barriers to full and equal employment.

His success in elective politics was perhaps less attributable to particular programs than to what a Los Angeles Times editorialist described as “the character of the man.” He wrote:

Earl Warren is an authentic leader. The people recognize him as such. In his philosophy of public service he truly represents the people as a whole. This, too, the people recognize. He is a trained, earnest, competent, successful servant of the people.

So, too, the measure of Earl Warren's contributions as Chief Justice cannot be fully explained or truly appreciated in terms of any particular decision or group of decisions in which he participated. He remained throughout his lifetime an “authentic leader,” dedicated to the betterment of the people as a whole. He perceived the cases before him as human problems, not abstract issues. He clearly understood the Court had a responsibility to speak not only to the Bench and Bar, but to all the people as well. His own opinions were written in language all could understand—particularly in the most important cases.

Earl Warren's commitment to promoting the dignity of every individual and his interest in communicating that message to all is simply, but eloquently, illustrated by his statement in Brown v. Board of Education that:

To separate (children) from others of similar age and qualifications solely because of their race generates a feeling of inferiority that may affect their hearts and minds in a way unlikely ever to be undone.

Earl Warren retained a basic faith that the legal process established by the Constitution remained the best means of protecting the individual, thus promoting the public good. He never doubted that our democratic processes were the best approach to government and that the inherent resiliency of American life could find solutions under law for our most serious problems. He believed that individual citizens, working together, could solve society's most pressing difficulties, that the basic goodness of the people would lead ultimately to general recognition of humanitarian innovation, and that one of government's principal responsibilities was to remain sufficiently accessible to permit and to foster self government.

His faith, his commitment, his vision of the responsibilities of government were expressed by him after his retirement as follows:

Where there is injustice, we should correct it; where there is poverty, we should eliminate it; where there is corruption, we should stamp it out; where there is violence, we should punish it; where there is neglect, we should provide care; where there is war, we should restore peace; and wherever corrections are achieved we should add them permanently to our storehouse of treasures.

On the Court, Chief Justice Warren drew upon his experiences in state government in many ways—most notably in his efforts to make our democratic processes work better. For the individual citizen he felt the need to review and refine the protective processes of the law to assure that fairness was more nearly achieved. As he favorably quoted from Weems v. United States in Miranda v. Arizona:

. . . Our contemplation cannot be only of what has been, but of what may be. Under any other rule a constitution would indeed be as easy of application as it would be deficient in efficacy and power. Its general principles would have little value and be converted by precedents into impotent and lifeless formulas. Right declared in words might be lost in reality.

He was alert to urge that the constitutional protection offered every individual be made meaningful by procedural safeguards. Thus in Miranda, the privilege against self-incrimination was deemed by him to be secured only if a defendant was informed of his right to remain silent and to have the assistance of counsel. So also, the Court in Gideon v. Wainwright reversed its earlier decision and determined that the right to counsel in a criminal trial is indeed a fundamental right, because the "right to be heard would be, in many cases, of little avail if it did not comprehend the right to be heard by counsel."

Chief Justice Warren's emphasis upon the effectiveness of the political process as essential for representative self government caused him to characterize Baker v. Carr and Reynolds v. Sims, establishing the principle of one man-one vote, as the most important in which he participated. "I believe," he wrote in 1972, "that if we had the (Reynolds v. Sims) decision shortly after the Fourteenth Amendment was adopted that most of the problems confronting us today, particularly the racial problems, would have been solved by the political process where they should have been decided, rather than through the courts acting only under the bare bones of the Constitution." He felt the Courts had to address the problem of grossly malapportioned state legislatures because there was no way under the state political process for the people to correct this condition.

Implicit in Warren's confidence in our system was the firm belief that our government is accountable to individual citizens. This is reflected in his opinion for the Court in Flast v. Cohen, holding that federal taxpayers have standing to challenge the constitutionality of federal expenditures which they allege to violate the Establishment Clause of the First Amendment. Like the reapportionment cases and Powell v. McCormack, Flast also exemplifies his efforts to open the courts and the processes of representative government to wider access.

Chief Justice Warren brought to the Court a perception of the human and social dimensions of cases. In a speech he delivered in 1965 at a meeting of the American Law Institute, he spoke eloquently of the many and tragic causes of crime. Among them he included low standards of law enforcement. He understood the need for determined law enforcement. In such cases as Terry v. Ohio, which dealt with constitutional implications of police use of tactics of "stop and frisk," he sought to bring into balance the necessity to protect society and its law enforcement officers and the rights of the suspected or accused. His opinions frequently reflected his conviction that it was precisely when the lawfulness of an individual's conduct was being officially challenged that the Court's responsibilities as expositor and guardian of the constitutional guarantees are at their greatest.

Seven years ago, I had the privilege to speak at the dedication of the Earl Warren Legal Center, in the presence of Chief Justice Warren. I then said, "In the history of our country the record of the Supreme Court of the United States under the leadership of Chief Justice Warren is unparalleled in the effective attention given to constitutional doctrines to safeguard the dignity of the individual. The accomplishment is awesome. It ranges from the basic rights of accused defendants, to the reapportionment of legislatures, to the protection of free speech, assembly, teaching and association, to freedom of conscience, to the right to equal education. And any lawyer could add to this list. The Court has thus been concerned with the well springs of our society . . . But I am sure the Chief Justice would agree that many of the decisions point directions for work which cannot be accomplished by the Court by itself. New tasks have been presented for the Bar and for public and private agencies; new responsibilities have been imposed upon the individual citizens."

To many in this country and throughout the world, Chief Justice Warren was a legendary figure: a man who understood and endeavored to give substance to the aspirations of the poor, the disenfranchised, the disillusioned. He was a man who remained calm and resolute in the midst of controversy, and used his craft as judge and statesman to recreate the ideals we hold as a people. Now his memory towers, the controversy fades, and history and we can claim him as one of the great judges who have renewed the strength of our law.

May it please this Honorable Court, and in the name of the lawyers of this Nation, and particularly of the Bar of this Court, I respectfully request that the resolutions presented to you in honor and memory of the late Chief Justice Earl Warren be accepted by you, and that they, together with the chronicle of these proceedings, be ordered kept for all time in the records of this Court."

The Chief Justice said: "Thank you, Mr. Attorney General.

The Court accepts today, with deep appreciation, the eloquent resolutions of the bar of the Supreme Court and their tributes to our late brother, the Honorable Earl Warren, Fourteenth Chief Justice of the United States.

Your resolutions depict so well the unique public life of this remarkable man that it is difficult to find more to add by way of response.

Perhaps, both for the present occasion and for the future, we can appropriately add to the general content of these resolutions by drawing on some of our own personal contacts with him in the more intimate relationship that is reserved to those who inhabit this place as members of the Court.

When Chief Justice Warren paid tribute to his predecessor, Chief Justice Vinson, twenty-one years ago, he said this of him:

"His life glowed so brightly in all the positions he held with such distinction that even before coming to the Chief Justiceship he had devoted practically all his mature life to rendering valuable services to his country."

Surely those words form a fitting description of Earl Warren's life and service, as you have summarized them in these resolutions.

There was indeed much in common between the careers of the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Chief Justices, for each had, in a very literal sense, given his entire life to his country, foregoing the obvious success that each would have achieved in private life, with its material rewards and privacy and freedom from the burdens of public life.

When Earl Warren came to this Court in 1953, it was under the difficult circumstances that you have alluded to, Mr. Solicitor General and Mr. Attorney General, arising, as we know, out of the sudden death of his predecessor shortly before the opening of the term of Court.

Only those who have been part of this Court's work can understand the burdens attendant on the opening or the closing of a term of the Court.

For a new Justice, and particularly for a new Chief Justice, to assume these responsibilities on one week's notice, four days after reaching Washington, as Earl Warren did in 1953, after having only a few days to wind up his affairs and duties as Governor of the great State of California, was a task of almost overwhelming dimensions.

But his colleagues of that time watched him make the transition from executive to judicial office quietly and calmly.

It is sometimes said that we conduct our work in seclusion and secrecy. And to the degree that this is true, it is simply because there is no other way the Court can function. That very seclusion, and our concentration on each of the problems at hand, means that we are thrown together in a relationship far more intimate than that of members of the Cabinet, for example, or of the Congress.

By October 1953 the trend for a new social, economic, and political balance in American life, to which the resolutions have alluded, and which had begun after World War I and accelerated after World War II, was ready to press new problems on the Courts in a greater degree than ever before in our history.

As the resolutions have noted, one crucial facet of the search for a new balance emerged in the administration of criminal justice. As we know, few lawyers in America who came ever to this Court had a broader exposure or better understanding of the day-to-day functioning of the criminal law than Earl Warren.

Because criminal justice has such a high visibility and affects so many people, and because of the reality that thousands of years of effort by the human race has not produced effective solutions, there is a sharp divergence of opinion as to the ways and means to administer justice, even when there is a consensus on objectives.

The popular wisdom is that justices are constantly locked in mortal combat with each other, within these walls. When that folklore was within reasonable bounds, Earl Warren could chuckle over it at lunch with his colleagues, and, drawing on his lifetime of combat in the political arena, he would remind them that there would be little to write about if the Court's work were faithfully depicted, and that news stories must color the reality to achieve readership. The truth, he would often remind his colleagues, is that, literally described, our activities are quite dull, even though not so to us.

In his sixteen years here, there were numerous verbal attacks on Earl Warren and on the Court. They were not easy for him, for his family, or for the Court. Yet these attacks helped make him a symbol of what many others saw as the best about America. And this was particularly true as to the people in the emerging countries of Africa and Asia and other parts of the world.

As the resolutions have noted, the Brown holding came in his first year on the Court. And just as that marked a beginning, not an end, the changes in criminal law and procedure continued for most of the sixteen years he presided over the Court.

Fortunately, a new attitude was beginning to emerge in the legal profession itself towards some of these changes. One example was on the right to counsel in criminal cases. For the legal profession, as for Earl Warren, the holding in the Gideon case, as one example, important as it was, presented little or no difficulty. As a prosecutor and as Governor of California, he had supported the Public Defender concept.

Sometimes it was said of him that, as Chief Justice, he turned his back on all that he had stood for as a prosecutor; and of course few things could be a warmer compliment to a prosecutor who had become a judge. With Justice Jackson, who was once confronted, I believe, in these Chambers with a position he had previously asserted as Solicitor General, Earl Warren could say in effect: "When I was a prosecutor, I did my duty as a prosecutor; but now I am a judge."

Some people have expressed surprise that in assessing his sixteen years on the Court Earl Warren ranked Baker v. Carr and Reynolds v. Sims above even the Brown case, as the Attorney General has just noted. I have a feeling that he thought the result in the Brown case was so obvious and so overdue that he did not consider the basic decision a difficult one, and surely it was not a difficult one for him, even though he was well aware of its importance and conscious that its implementation would take a long, long time.

This was also true of the Gideon case, whose significance he recognized, but whose result was so clearly inevitable that it gave him no difficulty. Later, when a unanimous Court decided the Argersinger case in 1972, extending the Gideon principle to all cases involving imprisonment, he welcomed that holding warmly.

The reapportionment cases, of course, brought into focus his vast understanding of the American political process, and with it his passion for fairness. When we consider that the three areas that dominated the Court's attention during his tenure, as the Attorney General has pointed out, were: reapportionment, the civil rights of minorities, and criminal justice, we see that these were the problems that had engaged his attention for all of his mature life; and in each of these areas the State of California had worked out solutions that commanded widespread and bi-partisan support.

The fact that Justices disagree on the construction of a statute or the meaning of the words of the Constitution rarely has any effect on the personal relations within the Court. And with the other Justices, particularly over the lunch table, he could have a hearty laugh at a news story depicting two Justices as being enraged over their opposing positions.

Perhaps the most difficult adjustment he had to make, and it was one that he and I talked about on several occasions, was the change from being a political leader and Governor, where he was free and even obligated to respond to attack, to being Chief Justice, bound by the tradition of silence. Up to 1953, as Governor, he could answer an attack directly, or he could call on members of his Party or of the Legislature to state the true facts in response to an incorrect story or an opposing editorial.

He told me several times how frustrating it was when a false news account was published concerning the work of the Court, or the activities within the Court, and he could not pick up a telephone and call some responsible person to give the facts as an answer, as he was able to do while he was Governor or Attorney General.

He felt that the legal profession had some obligation to respond to attacks on the Judiciary, and he pointed to the great work done by the bar in defense of the Court, when the Court-packing episode occurred in the 1930's.

I first met Earl Warren in 1945 or 1946, when he was Governor, and we happened to stay at the same hotel in Chicago, where he was attending a meeting of State Governors. He was about to have breakfast alone in the dining room, at quite an early hour, and he asked me to join him. We quickly reached a topic of common interest concerning his then current work on correctional problems, and his program to overhaul the California penal system which was attracting much attention in correctional circles. He had called in a group of the best penologists in the United States and asked them to study the problems of California and recommend solutions. He then secured legislation and appropriations and brought in an outstanding penologist, Richard McGee, as the Director of penal institutions in California.

He did much the same in improving the California courts, and his non-partisan, non-political, merit appointments to the bench gave California one of the best State judicial systems in the country.

Various members of the Court recall personal kindnesses of Earl Warren, and a few of them will illustrate his thoughtfulness. When Mr. Justice Stewart was appointed to the Court in 1958, he received a call from Earl Warren asking about his travel plans and insisting on sending his car to meet him at the Union Station. When the Stewart family arrived, sometime before 7:00 a.m. in the morning, they were met not only by the Chief's car and driver but by the Chief himself. And that presented some small logistical, practical problems, because there were six Stewarts in the party.

Another example of his thoughtfulness occurred when he was arranging to go to Florida for the dedication of a new law school at Gainesville, named for his old friend, Senator Spessard Holland, with whom he had worked in the Governors' Conference years before. In those days of frequent airplane sky-jacking, a government plane was made available to the Chief Justice for travel. And when he learned that I was on the dedication program, he called and invited me to accompany him on the plane. In the course of the trip, we talked about my view, expressed in a then recent law school lecture, that some of the changes in criminal procedure, resulting from opinions of the Court, would perhaps better have been left to the rule-making process.

We discussed my view that this would enable the rules of procedure to be made on the basis of a broad investigation, rather than on the narrow record of a particular case. And that it would also have the advantage of gradually developing a body of support within the legal profession and the public, affording a greater degree of acceptance of the end result when it was reached. We did not agree fully by any means in the course of that two-hour or two-and-a-half-hour plane ride, but I think each of us returned from the trip with a better understanding of the other's position, and, for my part, a better understanding of the whole problem as it can be seen only from this Court.

On the day that I was confirmed for this Court, I telephoned and asked if Mrs. Burger and I could call to pay our respects, which we did the following day, at the Warren apartment. From that day forward, his door was always open to me, up to the time of his last illness. He always responded to my requests for advice and counsel, but rarely ever volunteered. And his wise counsel was always very helpful to me. He leaned over backward, sometimes I thought unnecessarily so, to avoid the slightest appearance of wanting to participate in dealing with the administrative problems that crossed my desk.

The transition in 1969 presented small problems that would have been of no consequence if separated from the pressures attending the final two weeks of the term of the Court. We resolved them over lunch in several conferences. And I could not help but realize that his departure was, in some respects, as difficult as his taking office in 1953 on four days' notice.

In June 1969, he had presided over the Court for a full year after he had made the decision to retire, with all the emotional and other stresses attending such a step. When I asked him if he would administer the oath of office to me, and said that I wanted to do it in the Court in order to emphasize the continuity of the Court as an institution, at a time when there was far too much loose talk about prospective changes in the Court, he agreed. And after the ceremony on June 23rd of 1969, he said to me in the conference room, with great feeling, that he hoped all of our successors would follow that pattern. Then he and Mrs. Warren graciously provided a reception in the east conference room.

In the five years that followed we consulted frequently on the problems of administration and matters before the Judicial Conference of the United States. He had enlarged the functions of that Conference, and he had prevailed upon the Congress to add to it one district judge representative from each of the Circuits, an important change that was long overdue. He had also enlarged the committee structure, so as to draw nearly 200 judges into the work of the Conference advisory committees.

When it became clear that a comprehensive program of seminars for the training of new judges and for all judges on special topics was not feasible under the structure of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts, he along with Warren Olney, then the Director of that office, worked out the blueprint for the Federal Judicial Center, which has contributed so much to improving the work of the courts since it began operations in 1968, under the directorship of Mr. Justice Tom Clark. That institution, the Federal Judicial Center, stands as tangible evidence of his foresight and his concern to improve the work of the courts.

In one of our many talks he commented on how much he enjoyed the flower beds that had been placed just outside his windows. Knowing that as a Californian he was accustomed to very colorful flowers most of the year, I had asked the gardener to put masses of color in that particular bed. In some way he became aware of this. He then jokingly asked how I found time to worry about flowers. When I reminded him that I walked around the building almost daily to relax and to relieve my frustrations, just as he went to football games and duck hunting, he laughed heartily and said: "You'd better find a bigger place to walk; this place is not large enough to work off the frustrations of a Chief Justice."

When he came to the Court, Earl Warren, like his predecessors, Taft, Hughes, and Vinson, divorced himself totally from the political world in which he had been a foremost figure for three decades, and devoted all of his great energies to judicial work.

The sole exception in sixteen years, as the Attorney General has noted, was to accept appointment as Chairman of the Commission to investigate the murder of President Kennedy. The attacks on the report of that Commission did not disturb him unduly, partly because others could and did respond, as he said, and because political murders were so common in human history that there were always people around to exploit the conspiratorial explanation. He accepted that assignment from President Johnson with great reluctance, but he performed it superbly in the minds of all thoughtful people.

The memorial resolutions have referred to Nina Warren's place in Earl Warren's life, and in his public career. We on the Court know her as a most private person, one who planned and dedicated her life to help him carry the heavy burdens of his public career.

Our response today would not be complete without an acknowledgement of how much his accomplishments were the product of a truly joint enterprise and, because of Nina Warren, a most happy one.

In an interview shortly before his last illness, Earl Warren made a statement that expressed the essence of his philosophy. He said: "I believe that every generation of Americans has a greater opportunity than those who preceded. I have confidence in our country, in our people, and in our institutions; and I believe we can and will go on to still greater things."

It is axiomatic that the life and services of a significant public figure cannot be fully or accurately assessed in his lifetime. Not until the passage of time insulates judgments from contemporary events can this be done objectively. Yet it is very clear that Earl Warren's contribution can safely and fairly be assessed now, to give him a foremost place among the fifteen Chief Justices and more than eighty Associate Justices who have served on this Court since 1790. That assessment is bound to grow with the passage of time.

Those who sat with him up to June 23rd, 1969, and those of us whose contacts with him were chiefly in the five years that followed mourn the loss of a friend and colleague. Yet even as we do that, we take pride in his rich life and in his selfless service to our country.

Mr. Attorney General, Mr. Solicitor General, the Court thanks you for your presentations here today in memory of Earl Warren.

We ask you to convey to the Chairman and to the Committee on Resolutions our deep appreciation for their work. Your motion that these Resolutions be made part of the permanent records of the Court is hereby granted.

Adjourned until Monday, June 2, 1975, at 10 o'clock.
